

>urban soul

a solo show by pedro correa

Photographer Pedro Correa wanders around streets to capture the feeling of an instant, the soul of the city.

>french art studio is delighted to present for the time first time in the UK, Pedro Correa's solo show
>urban soul

Deeply influenced by his painting background through Impressionism, Pedro Correa hunts for highly photogenic snapshots of reality, hoping to grab the feeling of an instant and to transform seemingly ordinary street scenes into visual poetry.

Tearing apart the blurry veil that every city wraps around itself, the artist captures elements that often get unnoticed, by giving them a different perspective. According to Correa, Beauty is to be found everywhere, in the mix of various cultures, in people bumping into each other, colours, energy, and things happening on every corner...

*It's my perception of the city that I want to show, the feeling rather than an actual picture.
I don't want to create an alternate reality, but collect what is already out there and worth preserving in a time capsule.*

Correa aims at capturing ephemeral moments of non-manufactured beauty in order to create overall a portrait of a universal, timeless and imaginary city where every scene would be worth contemplating, and where the soul of the city merges with the soul of its inhabitants.

He offers to the viewer atmospheric, inspired fragments of his city, a place with a beating heart connected to his own.

Pedro Correa (b.1977) is graduated from the Brussels Royal Academy of Arts. He lives and works in Brussels. His work has been exhibited in Hong Kong, Washington D.C., New York, Los Angeles, Singapore, London, and Brussels.
