CHERNEE SUTTON

Chern'ee entered her first art competition at 13 years of age and won first place in the open category and has been painting madly ever since exhibiting her artworks at Queensland's Parliament House and selling to collectors from around the world all whilst still at school.

Chern'ee Sutton, born 1996 is a contemporary Indigenous artist whose heritage lies with the Kalkadoon people from the Mount Isa area in Queensland, Australia. A young Indigenous artist of extraordinary talent, Chern'ee Sutton uses her passion to share messages of reconciliation with her community. Chern'ee gives her time and skills to assist individuals and groups. Many charities have benefited from her generosity and artistic talent. Chern'ee is conscious of her position as a role model to young people and volunteers her time to teach primary school children how to paint using Indigenous art techniques.

Chern'ee was chosen to represent Indigenous electorates at the Queensland Youth Parliament motivated by a commitment to reconciliation and a desire to share her culture, history and art with others. Chern'ee is helping to close the gap between Indigenous and non-Indigenous Australians.

Her works have been widely exhibited and feature in a number of private and public collections in both Australia and overseas.
